

Abstract

- 5 Disclosed is a method for heating a roller that is used in the production and/or finishing of a web of material, particularly a paper web or paperboard web. According to said method, the heat required for heating the roller is generated at least in part inside the roller by combusting a fuel with air or oxygen at least in some regions inside the roller. Also
- 10 disclosed is a corresponding heatable roller.